Born out of lockdown, there is a unique new takeaway offering in Beaconsfield - a Salanti insPIered pie - which created much debate around our dinner table tonight, is it a pie or maybe a pizza?

Well, whichever you think it is, a Salanti Pie is new and novel and certainly one to be tried - then you can make up your own mind.

Salanti offer authentic Ossetian Pies, which after a quick geography lesson we discovered is Southern Russia. They are handmade to a traditional recipe, filled to bursting point with a variety of fillings sandwiched between two thin layers of an Ossetian pastry (or perhaps it's a type of bread - the debate goes on) and can feed up to 6 people.

We each had our favourites. There are plenty of wholesome comfort fillings to try from, like cheese and potato, minced beef, chard and cheese or pumpkin.

All can be eaten on their own or as part of a meal with accompaniment, the choice is yours. To top it all, we had a sweet apple pie, which was definitely a winner, and was equally nice eaten warm or cold.

The concept is quite simple, like any good takeaway, just visit the website (email or call them), choose your filling, decide if you want them delivered or if you are local enough you can collect.

The pies are cooked fresh to order so you receive them hot, ready for either lunch or dinner, great for sharing with friends, or like we did for a large family dinner. Or perhaps pick one up on route to a picnic or party as they would be equally fabulous as finger food.

So why not be insPIered by tradition and give a Salanti Ossetian pie a try.
